on the Sth day of December, 1896, the county attorne; of this county filed an information in this court charging you with the offense of assault with intent to commit murder. On the 14th day of the same month you were arraigned and pleaded not guilty to this charge. You were thereafter tried by a jury, and the jury found by their verdict that you were guilty as charged in the information. Have you anything to say at this time why the judgment of the court should not be pronounced upon that verdict?"

Edson promptly answered. "No, sir." A PERJURER.

A PERJURER.

"Your mother and sister," continued Judge Rolapp, "have been to see ine, and I sympathize deeply with them, and it must be a hard thing for a mother and a hard thing for a relative to have a son or brother charged with a crime, and particularly hard to see you charged with it, under the peculiar circumstances of this charge; but the jury by their verdict have said—and I think properly—that you committed an attempt to murder Lillie Ott. I have not the slightest doubt, from the evidence that has been disclosed herith that has been disclosed herithm such was your intention. You evidently did intend to kill the girl you said you loved. Besides that, the verdict of the jury has said—and I think properly—that you committed an addiet of the jury has said—and I think properly—that you committed an additional crime—you perjured yourself in saying that the girl had improper relations with you. The evidence does not substantiate such a statement, and but for the interference of providence you would stand here now ready to be sentenced to death; and but for the interference of this verdict a good many people might believe that girl dishonored. She is now vindicated so far as that is concerned.

NO MERCY.

"The court has the discretion, under the statute, given by the legislature, to vary the judgment, vary the number of years imprisonment that a person to vary the plantanest vary is falled to from a hould suffer for this crime, evidently interding that there were degrees of this crime, and there no doubt it; but I am inclined to think that if there ever was a case where the full intent of that crime was committed and inten-sified, you have demonstrated that to "I think that if, during the time you

He said:

"The Republican administration has started under very favorable auspices. It has made a good impression, and President McKinley's reception at Washington has been very cordial. Mr. McKinley is quite well, although ne is feeling the strain of constantly meeting people that has been practically without a let-up for six months. He has undertaken to see everybody who called on him, and that could not be kept up indefinitely without wearing him out. Mr. Hanna was asked his opinion of the Dingley bill and replied: "I consider it a satisfactory bill in that it goes far enough toward protection and provides a sufficient revenue. The passage of a revenue bill and the settlement of a basis for the transaction of the commercial business of this country is, in my opinion, the most important need of the hour, and that fact makes the passage of this bill the most important consummation of plans to be wished for at this time."

Washington, April 5,-President Me-Kinley will probably send a special message to congress tomorrow, asking that an appropriation be made immediately for the relief of the flood sufferers in the south and sout-west. In a talk this morning with Senator Jones and Representatives McRea. Brundige and McCullough, of Arkansas be said he appreciated the need of immediate legislation and in appealing to congress would take as his precedent the appropriation of $150.000 made by congress for the flood sufferers of 1890. The Arkansas delegation discussed the matter with the president and informed him of the precedent referred to and requested him to use it a. a basis for a message to congress. He wanted to know how much was needed and after some discussion it was agreed that $150.000 would be the most desirable sum. Of this amount Arkansas needs $76.000.

discussed, but it was only in an informal manner.

"I believe, however, that an arrangement satisfactory to all is a matter of but a little time and of an exchange of sentlment. As a matter of fact there has been at no time any straining of relations between the Jockey club and the American turf congress of the character generally assumed. That is, there has been no attack of one body upon the other. I am sure the Jockey club in no ruling it made sought to discriminate against the governing body in the west, and the Jockey club has been at all times free to concede that it had no idea that the rules adopted by the turf congress were any other than, in the opinion of that body, expedient or necessary for the government or existence of racing in the territory within its jurisdiction."

TOLD ABOUT BUTLER.

How the Australian Murderer Sought to Escape.

San Francisco, April 5.—The Call will omorrow tell of an alleged attempt made by the Australian murderer, Butler, to escape from the city prison, shortly after his arrival here, through a clever sub-bis arrival here, through a clever substitution.

On Friday night, March 25, a man giving his name as Reardon was picked up very drunk and taken to the prison. His close resemblance to Butler was much commented upon, and pictures litustrating the supposed accidental likeness were afterward published. It now appears that the man is the murderer's brother, and that his coming to San Francisco from a reanch in Scooma county was 'n response to a request from Butler, who wrote him, outfining a skillfully-laid plot whereby the multi-murderer hoped it make his escape. This letter was written in answer to one from the pseudo Reardon, who read of Butler's crimes and recognized him through newspaper photographs and his alias Ashe, which the Sonoma man claims is the true family name.
